

Protect New York's Workers During the COVID-19 Crisis

WHAT

The New York Health & Essential Rights Act, or NY HERO, is a proposed NYS bill that would require all businesses to adopt enforceable safety and health standards to protect workers from exposure and spread of COVID-19. Worker protections are critical to preventing community spread and ensuring that New York's economy can reopen safely.

HOW

ENFORCEABLE STANDARDS, NOT JUST GUIDELINES

Outbreaks continue to grow among workers across the country, and despite thousands of worker complaints, OSHA has largely abdicated its responsibility to protect the lives of workers. NY HERO directs the Department of Labor to issue protective standards to prevent exposure to COVID-19 that must be followed by businesses to protect all workers in the state, which will include protocols on: testing, face masks, PPE, social distancing, hand hygiene, disinfection, and engineering controls. Absent OSHA action, other jurisdictions have created enforceable standards with consequences for violations - it's now time for New York to act.

Enforceable Standards

DOL issues standards differentiated by industry, covering all workers

Employer adopts the DOL standards or creates own standards that equal or exceed those of the DOL

Standards are mandatory and enforceable under the law

ROLE OF WORKERS IN ENSURING SAFE CONDITIONS

COVID-19 is highly contagious and requires constant vigilance to prevent its spread. It will remain difficult to solely place this role on the DOL to frequently monitor businesses. Workers are well positioned to identify the safety and health risks in their workplace, and research has shown that worker voice has a positive impact on employer compliance with the law. NY HERO authorizes the creation of worker health and safety committees that will be empowered to raise complaints and report violations. The bill also includes strong anti-retaliation provisions that allow workers to exercise their rights without fear of reprisal.

Workplace Health and Safety Committees

Workers

- ✓ Right to form health and safety committee
- ✓ Trained and provided paid leave to perform duties
- ✓ Right to refuse work in unsafe conditions

Employer

- ✓ Must recognize committee
- ✗ Interfering with committee formation
- ✗ Retaliating against workers who exercise rights or report violations

DETER VIOLATIONS & HOLD EMPLOYERS ACCOUNTABLE

COVID-19 can mean fatal consequences for many workers, and worker infections have also resulted in community and household spread in New York State. That is why the goal of this bill must be to deter violations in the first place. Strong penalties and enforcement mechanisms will lead to increased compliance and lower COVID transmission rates, which in turn will boost consumer confidence in the economy. In addition, strong enforcement levels the playing field for businesses that do comply with the law.

Holding Employers Accountable

Department of Labor

- Directed to enforce this law and notify employers of violations
- May assess penalties for violations that go uncorrected
- Will have power to seek an injunction under egregious circumstances

Workers will have the right to seek private action in court for violations
